Become effective, efficient, then scale up: BRAC explains its approach

By Ashlee Betteridge

The Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC) has achieved global recognition for its large-scale community development programs. It claims it is the largest NGO in the world by number of employees.

PBS Newshour recently ran a story on the organisation’s successes.

Fazle Abed, the organisation’s founder, explains BRAC’s philosophy and how it has expanded its reach and impact. It is interesting viewing for anyone interested in how community-based programs can be scaled up without compromising effectiveness.

About the author/s

Ashlee Betteridge
Ashlee Betteridge is the Manager at the Development Policy Centre. She was previously a Research Officer at the centre from 2013-2017. A former journalist, she holds a Master of Public Policy (Development Policy) from ANU and has development experience in Indonesia and Timor-Leste.