

Australasian Development Economics Workshop calling for papers

by Ashlee Betteridge
3 February 2014

The tenth annual Australasian Development Economics Workshop, to be held at The University of Western Australia on June 5-6, is calling for papers.

The workshop brings together development economists from Australia and internationally with particular emphasis on the Asia-Pacific region. High quality academic papers on all aspects of development economics are welcome, with a submission deadline of April 1.

Professor Lant Pritchard from Harvard University will present the keynote address at the workshop, while Professor James Riedel from Johns Hopkins University will lead a roundtable on the middle income trap.

More details on how to submit a paper or attend are available here [pdf].
