

Best of the Blog 2025

by Amita Monterola

15 December 2025

It's been a massive year for aid and development in Australia and globally. The Development Policy Centre was proud to host events and publish a stream of blog articles and podcasts that brought together academics, policy makers, development practitioners and younger researchers to discuss global and regional changes and debate ideas for a more generous, peaceful and sustainable future.

Ahead of the federal election, we published a blog series based on an important piece of research by Alyssa Leng, Ryan Edwards and Terence Wood which found that people's perceptions of migrants are inaccurate, but can be changed when additional information is provided. We also co-produced a special election podcast to provide a comprehensive look at the competing priorities and policy proposals shaping the aid debate with the Australian Council for International Development, the International Development Contractors Community and the Safer World for All Campaign.

Our Pacific labour mobility research team launched Wave Two of the Pacific Labour Mobility Survey while continuing to track Pacific Australia Labour Mobility scheme changes and the scheme's impacts on regional communities — as well as reporting on the outcomes of the first and second round of the Pacific Engagement Visa (PEV) allocation process. Catch up with Natasha Turia's PEV analysis via blogs and a podcast.

We brought together academics and government representatives at the 2025 Pacific Update, co-hosted by the University of the South Pacific in Suva, Fiji, from 3-5 July. Pacific Islands Forum Secretary-General Baron Waqa called for Pacific unity and Tovi Amona brought us a story of hope as PNG businesses fund the fight against violence. Stephen Howes and Rubayat Chowdhury launched a discussion paper which argues that GDP is a misleading indicator of economic performance in the Pacific, and that the focus should be on Gross National Disposable Income.

The 50th anniversary of Papua New Guinea's independence on 16 September was an important milestone which the Centre celebrated in a number of ways in PNG and Canberra. Stephen Howes led a team of ANU and University of PNG (UPNG) economists which co-authored a new economic history of PNG, Struggle, Reform, Boom and Bust. We co-hosted a special program at the 2025 PNG Update on 21-22 August at UPNG which featured reflections from significant public figures such as Bougainville's John Momis, Dame Carol Kidu and Sir Bart Philemon.

DEVPOLICYBLOG

Looking towards the future, Grant Walton and Michael Kabuni launched a comprehensive report on anti-corruption efforts in PNG at the August Update. We supported the PNG Canberra Students Association to host a symposium in September at the Crawford School of Public Policy featuring eminent academics, former UPNG Vice-Chancellor Albert Mellam and Ron May in conversation with members of the new generation of PNG researchers.

At the start of the year, while everyone was reeling from the dismantling of USAID, Robin Davies mapped the donor funding landscape to assess whether we are really seeing the end of foreign aid. Blog authors were concerned about the sudden gaps in aid funding and also humanitarian leadership, citing multiple protracted crises such as Africa and the Middle East, in particular the conflict in Gaza, and close to home in Myanmar. Yet some saw grounds for optimism.

So from 3-5 December, when we held the 2025 Australasian Aid and International Development Conference in Canberra with our long-time co-hosts, The Asia Foundation, more than 600 people joined us to reflect and look ahead. The conversation ranged over topics from the recent International Court of Justice ruling on climate inaction to continuing human rights violations in places like Afghanistan. And Eric Olander gave us a reality check during the annual Mitchell Oration — saying that China will not replace aid from Western donors but is rebuilding the international development arena in its own way.

Finally, Robin Davies, Finn Clarke and I produced the 12th season of the Devpolicy Talks podcast this year. We had excellent guests including Helen Durham who delivered the AAC dinner keynote, Biman Prasad on Pacific economics and Nina Schwalbe and Judith Cefkin on the Trump-era aid landscape. We started the year with a series on the important issue of food security in the era of climate change and end with the voices from our region talking about the strength of Pacific democracy.

Aid and Development

The casual cruelty of USAID's demise by Bob McMullan

Burden-shedding: the unravelling of the OECD aid consensus by Robin Davies

DEVPOLICYBLOG

“Manufactured chaos”: Trump 2.0 puts his stamp on US foreign aid by Cameron Hill

A Silver Linings Playbook for the aid sector in 2025 by Lisa Denney

2025 federal election special Devpolicy Talks podcast

Have Trump’s cuts made Australians kinder? 2025 aid attitudes survey by Terence Wood and Cameron Hill

The Beyond Aid series on the Fourth International Conference on Financing for Development by Nicola Nixon, Mandakini D. Surie, Su Lae Yi and Ojashwi KC

China, the Global South and the post-American international order by Eric Olander

The continuing ban on girls’ education in Afghanistan by Matiullah Qazizada

Beyond the rhetoric: youth and anti-corruption efforts in Indonesia by Garry Rosario da Gama

Message for Myanmar: “If you need anything, let me know, naw.” by J Hlaing

How should Australia respond to the starvation of Gaza? by Annabel Dulhunty

Médecins Sans Frontières / Doctors Without Borders Australia series

The Pacific

Public opinion on immigration: more malleable than you think by Alyssa Leng, Ryan Edwards and Terence Wood

Understanding Pacific communities in Australia: where do they live? by Huiyuan Liu and Toan Nguyen

GNDI: a new approach to measuring economic performance in the Pacific by Stephen Howes and Rubayat Chowdhury

The 2025 Pacific Engagement Visa is open — how did it go in 2024? by Natasha Turia and Stephen Howes

No evidence SWP affected domestic farm worker earnings by Ryan Edwards and Toan Nguyen

Women in New Zealand’s RSE scheme: a small but stable workforce by Charlotte Bedford

The burden of chairing the Pacific Islands Forum by Sione Tekiteki

Vindicating Pacific climate leadership: what does the ICJ decision mean? by Bal Kama

Papua New Guinea

Struggle, reform, boom and bust: a profound wake-up call for PNG by Ian Ling-Stuckey

Papua New Guinea at 50 – a reflection by Maholopa Laveil

50 years of independence has failed the Polopa people by Busa Jeremiah Wenogo

Ten things to celebrate on PNG's 50th anniversary of independence by Luke McKenzie

PNG's fight against corruption must draw on its culture by Yuambari Haihuie

Political will and anti-corruption reform in PNG: between hope and reality by Grant Walton and Michael Kabuni

Bel isi PNG: a public-private partnership responds to family and sexual violence by Tovi Amona

Respectful relationships: the missing piece in PNG's education curriculum by Michael Suau

Gendered differences in student attitudes to gender by Anna Kapil and Stephen Howes

What women want: water access and representation in PNG by Safa Fanaian, Grant Walton and John Cox

Unwanted births and fertility in Papua New Guinea by Kingtau Mambon

To you, who hold power and will listen by Naomi Woyengu

Reflections

Vale Charles Lepani by Stephen Howes

DEVPOLICYBLOG

Honouring our sister, Agnes Titus by Helen Hakena, Julie Bukikun, Shamima Ali and Sabet Cox

Ovu ga hoe! I will not go! by Gordon Peake

Join the conversation

The Devpolicy Blog is produced by Robin Davies and Amita Monterola. We are pleased to be able to share our content daily with the Pacific media outlets thanks to our regional consultant Sadhana Sen.

We welcome blog submissions from a range of authors including academics outside ANU, policy makers, development practitioners, journalists and students. Please read our guidelines carefully before submitting a blog.

We are taking a break from publishing from Friday 19 December until Monday 12 January. However you can submit at any time via our article submission form and, for new authors, the associated contributor profile form. We will get back to you in the New Year.

We are happy to take suggestions for podcast guests and topics. Please email your suggestions to devpolicy@anu.edu.au.

This is the 15th article in the annual Best of the Blog series, which started in 2011.

Author/s:

Amita Monterola

Amita Monterola is the Research Communications Coordinator at the Development Policy Centre. She is Editor of Devpolicy Blog and co-host of the Devpolicy Talks podcast.

Link: <https://devpolicy.org/best-of-the-blog-2025/>