

Devpolicy seeks casual Research Officer on labour mobility

by Ashlee Betteridge

23 May 2017

We are currently looking for a Research Officer with subject knowledge on labour mobility to assist us as a casual for several months. There may be the possibility for the successful candidate to apply for an ongoing, full-time Research Officer position later this year.

Unfortunately, our current labour mobility and migration expert, Henry Sherrell, will soon be moving into a new role at Parliament. We are looking for someone to take over Henry's work writing blogs on Pacific labour mobility and migration, and compiling our monthly specialised email newsletter on this topic.

The role would involve around 10-15 hours of a work a week.

The ideal candidate would have strong writing skills, an understanding of labour mobility and migration issues (policy, industry or research experience on this topic would be particularly valued), and the ability to work independently with minimal supervision.

If you are interested in this role, please contact us at devpolicy@anu.edu.au (Subject: Labour Mobility Research Officer) with your CV and a brief covering email outlining why you would be a good fit. Applications close 4 June 2017.
