

Sean Dorney says goodbye as he leaves PNG, possibly for the last time (Foreign Correspondent: Craig Berkman)

Fortnightly links: languages in development, The Gambia's migration exodus, Sean Dorney visits PNG, and more

By Terence Wood and Sachini Muller
31 August 2018

Do RCTs, or for that matter individual case studies of any sort, have any role in producing knowledge that can be used elsewhere? Mary Ann Bates and Rachel Glennerster discuss.

ABC reporter Sean Dorney makes an emotional final visit to PNG.

New research suggests that languages generally have a low priority in development, leading to subpar interpretations and confusion in communities about the objectives of aid projects.

A group of young Gambians are highlighting the potential benefits of staying in The Gambia, trying to change the 'migration exodus' mindset.

Former UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, who passed away recently, is remembered not only for his work, but his warmth, decency and grace, reports BBC News.

About the author/s

Terence Wood

Terence Wood is a Fellow at the Development Policy Centre. His research focuses on political governance in Western Melanesia, and Australian and New Zealand aid.

Sachini Muller

Sachini Muller was a Research Officer at the Development Policy Centre. She is currently completing a Master of Globalisation at ANU.

Link: <https://devpolicy.org/fortnightly-links-20180831/>

Date downloaded: 7 May 2024

Australian
National University

The Devpolicy Blog is based at the Development Policy Centre, Crawford School of Public Policy, College of Asia and the Pacific, Australian National University.