Workers and unions rallied on the one-year anniversary of the Rana Plaza collapse (Solidarity Center/Flickr/CC BY-ND 2.0)

Fortnightly links: climate change, domestic advocacy, Rana Plaza, and more

By Sachini Muller and Terence Wood
27 April 2018

A new World Bank report says that climate change could force over 140 million people to migrate within countries by 2050.

Can international NGOs help domestic counterparts in domestic advocacy? Here's a summary of what Oxfam UK has learnt in its (enviably high quality) evaluations of their work in this area.

We need to resolve protracted conflicts to reduce food insecurity, according to the latest Global Report on Food Crises.

Following the Oxfam sexual abuse scandal, Devex reports on Caritas Belgium's strategy to avoid such issues.

Five years after the Rana Plaza collapse in Bangladesh, workers are safer than ever before, but the initiatives that have ensured this are about to come to an end. Devex reports on the progress made and the challenges that still exist.

Deborah Bräutigam takes a tilt at the conventional wisdom about Chinese aid in Africa in the Washington Post.

About the author/s

Sachini Muller
Sachini Muller was a Research Officer at the Development Policy Centre. She is currently completing a Master of Globalisation at ANU.

Terence Wood
Terence Wood is a Fellow at the Development Policy Centre. His research focuses on political governance in Western Melanesia, and Australian and New Zealand aid.

DEVPOLICYBLOG

Link: https://devpolicy.org/fortnightly-links-climate-change-domestic-advocacy-rana-plaza-and-more-20180427/
Date downloaded: 25 April 2024