

Children at Kapuri School, South Sudan (UN Photo/JC Molwaine/Flickr CC-BY-NC-ND 2.0)

Fortnightly links: CO2 emissions, epidemics, food waste, South Sudan, and more

By Camilla Burkot and Terence Wood
14 July 2017

Hannah Ritchie and Max Rosser have a tidy summary of trends in carbon dioxide emissions and their relationship to development.

In the New York Times, Tina Rosenberg writes on the new Center for Epidemic Preparedness Innovations (CEPI), which is looking to accelerate vaccine development and approvals. (And if you're in Canberra and interested in the topic of pandemics and emerging infectious disease, do mark our Aug 7 evaluation forum on your calendar).

This post on the New Food Economy blog will make you think again about food waste - and about the importance of methodology, definitions, and transparency in research and media reporting.

Michael Bachelet and Kate Geraghty's report in the Sydney Morning Herald provides insights into the human costs of conflict and famine in South Sudan. Their travel to the region was funded by CARE Australia and the Campaign for Australian Aid.

If some development-related TV is what you're after this weekend, the latest episode of ABC's Foreign Correspondent [30 mins] examines GiveDirectly's basic income trial in Kenya. It also looks at the aid industry and political economy of aid more broadly.

About the author/s

Camilla Burkot

Camilla Burkot was a Research Officer at the Development Policy Centre, and Editor of the Devpolicy Blog, from 2015 to 2017. She has a background in social anthropology and holds a Master of Public Health from Columbia University, and has field experience in Eastern and Southern Africa, and PNG. She now works for the Burnet Institute.

Terence Wood

Terence Wood is a Fellow at the Development Policy Centre. His research focuses on political governance in Western Melanesia, and Australian and New Zealand aid.

Link: <https://devpolicy.org/fortnightly-links-co2-emissions-epidemics-food-waste-south-sudan-more-20170714/>

Date downloaded: 17 April 2024

Australian National University

The Devpolicy Blog is based at the Development Policy Centre, Crawford School of Public Policy, College of Asia and the Pacific, Australian National University.