

Annual Update: Eliminating Violence against Women in PNG

Oxfam is an international NGO that aims to end poverty and injustice. In Papua New Guinea, Oxfam supports 12 community-based organisations in nine provinces working to eliminate violence against women (EVAW). Our EVAW Program delivers crisis services including safe house accommodation, counselling, and emergency relocation, as well as paralegal advice, and community outreach to raise awareness among men and boys on the rights of women.

This Annual Update summarises some key results. To better understand the epidemic of violence against women, we need better data. In this Update we highlight some early findings emerging from our work.

Causes of violence

Oxfam has undertaken a detailed analysis of a sample of clients from rural, urban, and semi-urban locations to help better identify the causes of violence. Early findings are set out in the graph below. The preliminary findings are drawn from a sample consisting of 70 per cent female victims and 30 per cent male victims. The average age of a male victim is 37. The average age of a female victim is 32.

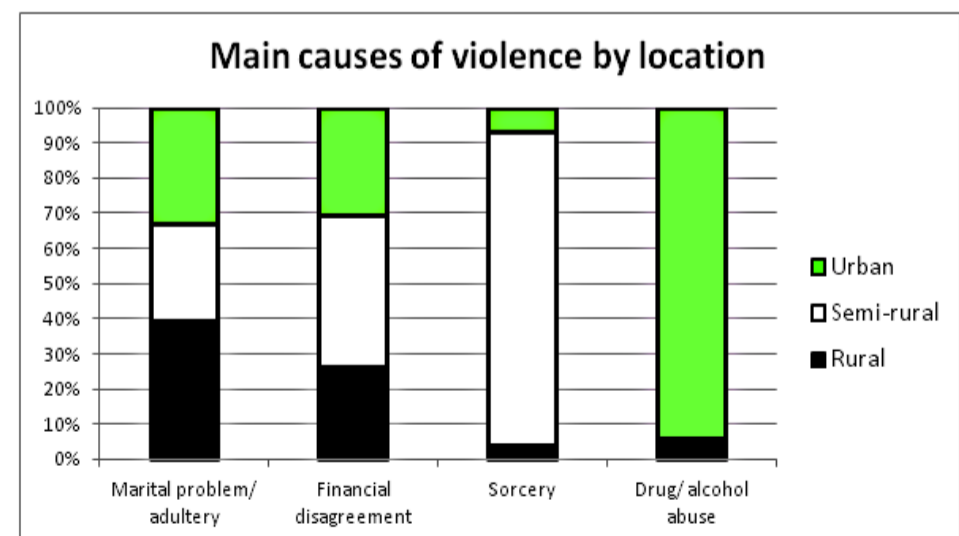

From the sample we have studied, four key causes of violence have been reported by victims:

- Marital problems including polygamy-related arguments and adultery.
- Disagreements over financial management
- Violence caused by accusations of sorcery.
- Violence caused by drug and alcohol abuse.

Violence & Sorcery in Highlands

Oxfam supports the Highlands Women's Human Rights Defenders Network (HWHRDN) which provides counseling, referral, and relocation of clients facing life-threatening violence. Since October 2013 Oxfam and its partners have, on average, rescued three people a week facing extreme violence - the vast majority were accused of sorcery.

Oxfam's Eliminating Violence against Women (EVAW) Program is supported by private donors in Australia, supporters of Oxfam, and the Australian Government.
