

Upcoming Canberra event: health care in danger

by Ashlee Betteridge
19 September 2014

The International Committee of the Red Cross and Australian Red Cross are hosting an event in Canberra on Wednesday 24 September (5:45pm-7pm, Finkel Theatre ANU) to launch a new report and hold a panel discussion on ways to improve the security and delivery of health care in armed conflict and other emergencies.

Titled 'Health Care in Danger: the way forward', the speakers at the event include: Dr Bruce Eshaya-Chauvin, Medical Advisor to the Health Care in Danger project in Geneva, Switzerland; Mr Paul McPhun, Executive Director of Médecins Sans Frontières – Australia; and Dr Sarah Miller, a Canberra-based clinical and forensic psychologist with international experience as a delegate for the Movement.
